From the MD's Desk

Think Germany, and most of us would conjure up the image of the iconic Brandenburg gate in Berlin. Think of a German, and it would be Max Muller—the 19th century scholar and Indologist, who opened up the mystic Indic civilisation to thousands of Germans and other westerners. In his book “India: What Can it Teach Us?”, Muller wrote, “If I were to look over the whole world to find out the country most richly endowed with all the wealth, power, and beauty that nature can bestow...I should point to India.” Even 150 years ago, Muller could look beyond the obvious poverty of a colonised nation to its natural bounty, cultural heritage, and its latent potential.

Therefore, it would not be an exaggeration to say that Germany and India have always had a spiritual bond that went beyond trade and commerce.

Today, Germany is perhaps India's most significant partner in Europe. There are an estimated 2,000 German companies operating in India. They have invested nearly $15 billion in India as foreign direct investment since 2000. And, according to industry body CII, there are more than 200 Indian companies operating in Germany today, generating billions of dollars in revenues annually, and employing tens of thousands of people. There are an estimated 43,000 Indian students enrolled in German colleges and universities, making them the largest cohort of foreign students in the country. In terms of bilateral trade, we are already doing $34 billion, with potential to hit $100 billion.

Under Prime Minister Narendra Modi, the engagement with Germany has been exceptional. PM Modi and German Chancellor Olaf Scholz met thrice in 2022; and Mr Scholz visited India not once but twice in 2023. He will be visiting India again in October this year. The strategic intent behind these meetings and visits is amply clear. There is much to gain—not just for the two countries, but the world at large—from forging deeper ties between the two countries.

News9 Global Summit in Stuttgart, Germany, has been conceived with the idea of bringing together a larger group of stakeholders from both sides to discuss and ideate on key issues for the benefit of the two nations. Our partners in this summit are some of the most prestigious German institutions, including Bundesliga and DFB-Pokal. Co-host of the summit is VfB Stuttgart, with the support of the state of Baden-Wurttemberg.

The summit will be held at the MHP Arena, Stuttgart's state-of-the-art stadium, as a three-day event between November 21 and 23 of the sorts never seen before. There will be high-level discussions, insightful speeches, fireside conversations, cultural performance, and even awards.

In sum, News9 Global Summit will focus on deepening the bilateral relations between India and Germany and, therefore, bring together some of the most important stakeholders across politics, business, civil society, sports, and entertainment from both sides.

This is a summit you just can't miss. Come, join us at Stuttgart.
